IIA AND MERIDIAN TECHNOLOGIES TEAM UP ON HOMELAND SECURITY ACTIVITIES

Washington, D.C. -- Integrated Infrastructure Analytics, Inc., a leading provider of specialized power, water, and homeland security products and support services, is pleased to announce that it has formed a strategic alliance with Meridian Technologies, Inc., a manufacturer of high quality fiber optic transmission systems for voice, video and data solutions that are designed, engineered and serviced at its location just outside New York City.

Ed Badolato, the President and CEO of Integrated Infrastructure Analytics, Inc. (IIA) has developed IIA into a company with activities that span four key disciplines - power generation, water purification, strategic decision making, and homeland security. With years of experience in observing terrorist and sabotage activities, predicting possible scenarios and providing optimal plans to prevent and mitigate adverse acts, IIA applies the global and domestic business vision and experience of its top-flight management team's proven record to successfully plan and execute business opportunities to provide solutions to customer's critical challenges.

Meridian Technologies is known world-wide for its superior and reliable product performance capabilities and diagnostics, and provides system integration and architecture design support in the areas of security and surveillance technologies.

"IIA provides an established presence in Washington," said Mr. Badolato. "Our mission is to assist clients in the field of homeland security by providing vulnerability assessments, developing programs and training as well as making recommendations for systems that would help facilitate enhanced security. This will be accomplished through the integration of the business and technology vision and capabilities of both companies."

Denise Shay, Meridian Chairman stated that, "the mutual goal of this partnership is to provide our clients with optimum levels of service, support and products."
